I. Key Words

A. Reservation

1. A reservation contains general information about an event, such as event name, event type, the name of the customer who is holding the event and the contact person and phone number for that customer. The individual bookings within a reservation contain more specific details.

B. Booking

1. A booking is a component of a reservation. A booking specifies the date, starting and ending times and location for an event. Reservations are made up of one or more bookings. Examples of reservations that might include multiple bookings are: a multi-day training seminar, a one-day conference that utilizes multiple rooms, or a weekly meeting. Each booking has its own status and its own booking details.

C. Booking Details

1. Booking details are the items or services that are added to a booking, like a request for an IMS technician or a request for tables and chairs. Booking details also include setup directions and miscellaneous information.
D. Event Bar

1. The event bar is a visual representation of a booking that can be found in “the book.” The event bar shows you the setup time, breakdown time, event time, and event name.
E. Confirmation Report

1. A report that shows important information related to a booking or a reservation including the customer, customer contact information, date(s), time, room(s), requests for services, and any other miscellaneous information.

Under the “Calendar” tab click the date(s) on which you want to reserve room(s) (and/or click the Date Pattern button to select a pattern of dates. An example of a date pattern is the first Monday of the month or every week on Thursday). For details on how to create a Date Pattern see section 2C.

   a) Standard—this search method will return any rooms in the building you chose that are available on the date(s) you selected.
   b) Best Fit—this search method will help you find a room that is available on as many days as possible during your date pattern. This method will return a list of available rooms and the number of days they are available. This method is particularly useful when you are booking TA Sessions or a meeting that reoccurs.
   c) Specific Room—this search method allows you to indicate the particular room you want to book.
5. The location drop down will default to building, and the building drop down will default to all. Leave fields as is.

7. Assign a status using the drop down menu and click next. Statuses are assigned based on the following definitions:
   a) Tentative-The customer is tentatively holding the space and will follow-up to confirm or release. Note: the system will ask for a reconfirm date. Please enter the date you intend to reconnect with the customer.
   b) In Process- The space is confirmed but all setup details are to be determined or to be confirmed.
   c) Confirmed- The space and all details are finalized and you are sending the confirmation by email to the work order desk for Physical Plant Services, to ims-events for IMS audio/visual requests, to Bon Appétit for those bookings with Bon Appétit notes, and to the customer.

d) Waitlist - The space was previously booked and the customer is asking to be next in line if the space becomes available.
