Introduction to International Relations
GOVT 155. Spring 2009
Wesleyan University
Syllabus

“The element of truth which people are so ready to disavow, is that men are not gentle creatures who want to be loved, and who at the most can defend themselves if they are attacked; they are, on the contrary, creatures among whose instinctual endowments is to be reckoned a powerful share of aggressiveness.”

Sigmund Freud in "Civilization and its Discontents"

OVERVIEW

Why does war occur? Is Freud’s quote above right about human nature? Does an aggressive human nature lead us to war? Or does war occur because some types of states, perhaps fascist ones, are more prone to war? Or because of some greater general uncertainty underlying the anarchy of world order? Is world government the solution? Is it possible or even desirable? Can states cooperate to solve global environmental problems like climate change? This course addresses such questions in its survey of the field of international relations. The first part introduces three major theoretical traditions and their applications to world events over the last century. The bulk of the course will consist of study cycles that focus on several important issues in global politics, including: humanitarian intervention, America’s current conflicts in Afghanistan and Iraq, the political economy of poverty and development and the global governance of climate change. Finally, the course considers current and future challenges in the practice and study of international relations.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

By the end of this course…

1. You will know more about important problems in world politics from the past, the present and the future and why they are directly relevant to our everyday lives.
2. You will understand and be able to evaluate several major theoretical approaches to world politics.
3. You will be able to think and argue critically about issues in international relations and convey your thoughts in written form. Not every one of you plan to continue in a career in international relations, but the same skills we stress in this class—critical thinking, analytical reading, and writing—will be important no matter what you do.

READINGS

The following are REQUIRED:
- Bayliss, Smith and Owens. The Globalization of World Politics. (The syllabus will call this BSO)
- Mingst & Snyder. Essential Readings in World Politics. (The syllabus will call this MS).
- Additional articles will be made available on Blackboard
ASSIGNMENTS AND GRADING PLAN

Classroom Engagement: Participation and Attendance (15%)
This course requires not only attendance but also active participation. This entails doing the readings before class, thinking critically about them and the topics we are discussing. Active participation can significantly help your grade in the course, non-participation can significantly lower your grade, and non-attendance WILL significantly lower your grade.

Attendance and active participation
(a) You must attend class. Think of it as if you are a pilot learning to fly. You have to put in a number of hours in the cockpit to qualify.
(b) You must be active in class. This can take a variety of forms, including: speaking in class, asking questions, emailing me questions, and participating on the course blog.
(c) You can miss two classes without any serious consequence. If you miss more than 5 classes you will receive no participation credit.

Online News and Readings Blog
(a) This is part of your participation grade
(b) You will “blog” news on international relations to the class twice during the semester. The length of each post should be a minimum of 100 words. There is no maximum. There will be sign-ups for different dates during the second week of classes.
(c) You will “blog” a reaction to one reading this term. I will assign those. The length of the post should be a minimum of 300 words.
(d) You will comment on others’ news posts at least twice during the semester.
(e) Your posts are due the MIDNIGHT PRIOR to class.
(f) PRINT one copy and bring to class.

Grading:
Posts will be given a grade of 1 – 5: (5) inspired, (4) clever and interesting, (3) meets expectations, (2) below expectations, and (1) needs serious improvement.

Study Cycle Presentations (15%)
Students will be divided into groups to create and facilitate an original debate, simulation or extended presentation on topics in international relations. Group members should meet in advance to make sure that each group member presents a distinct insight about the reading without excessive repetition from the group as a whole. Engage your audience and, if you elect to employ a visual aid such as power point, use it to enhance the message you deliver rather than be the central focus of your presentation. In the past, students have run simulations of United Nations meetings and interactive learning games.

Here are some other guidelines:
(a) No reading summaries
(b) You must turn in a 1 ½ -page reaction to the presentation that does the following:
   - assess own contribution
   - assess the contributions of other group members
   - cites sources consulted in creating the presentation
   - due one week after the presentation
(c) Grading rubric is at the end of this syllabus

Research or Policy Paper (35%)
A grading rubric will be provided so that you will know how your paper will be evaluated. You will also get a chance to “grade” each other’s rough drafts in a peer-review session.

Further information is at the end of the syllabus

Note on Late Papers: Late papers will be graded down 5 points for each day late, to a maximum of 50% credit for the assignment. No matter how late a paper is, it will always be worth submitting (you will always get at least 50% credit).

Midterm (15%). There will be one midterm for the course.
Final Exam (20%)
There will be a final exam for the course. There will be a study guide. The purpose will be for you to synthesize what you have learned in the course. Note that the final is worth the same as the group presentations and less than the research paper.

Grade weight: 20 points

Coursework will be weighted as follows:

2. Group Presentation: 15 pts.
5. Final Exam (In-Class): 20 pts.

\[
\begin{array}{ccc}
15 & + & 50 & + & 35 & = & 100
\end{array}
\]

The Grading Scale
I will be using the following grading scale in this course:

- 98-100 A+
- 94-97 A
- 90-93 A-
- 87-89 B+
- 84-86 B
- 80-83 B-
- 77-79 C+
- 74-76 C

Rules of the Game

Class Protocol
1. Class will start on time. If you are more than 10 minutes late you will be marked as absent.
2. No talking during class, no reading material during class, and no inappropriate use of electronic equipment (cell phones, laptops, etc.) during class.
3. I reserve the right to make new rules and changes to the course.
4. Diversity in discussion. Throughout the course of the semester, we will be addressing a variety of issues on which people will have strong and diverse opinions. It is critical that we respect one another’s thoughts, and address our comments at the ideas, not the person. Our class is not a forum for demeaning or threatening language.
5. Academic Integrity. Plagiarism and Cheating. Plagiarism and cheating will not be tolerated. I feel especially strong about this when it comes to student writing. Please remember that the consequences for any kind of cheating or plagiarism can result in an “F” for the class and possibly other actions by the university.

Wesleyan’s policies can be found online at: http://www.wesleyan.edu/studenthandbook/3_honorsystem.html

Disability-Related Accommodations
It is the policy of Wesleyan University to provide reasonable accommodations to students with documented disabilities. Students, however, are responsible for registering with Disabilities Services, in addition to making requests known to me in a timely manner. If you require accommodations in this class, please make an appointment with me as soon as possible, so that appropriate arrangements can be made. IR Research Paper

Asst. Prof. Michael Nelson.
Spring 2009

Basic Facts
Length: 10 - 11 pages, double-spaced, 12-point font, 1-inch margins. Do not go over 11 pages!
Prospectus Due: February 17th
Rough Draft Due: April 14th; bring one copy for peer-editing, email the other to the professor
Final Draft Due: April 28th, in class.
Grade weight: 35 points

Note on Late Papers: Late papers will be graded down 5 points for each day late, to a maximum of 50% credit for the assignment. No matter how late a paper is, it will always be worth submitting (you will always have an opportunity to get at least 50% credit).

You have 2 options:

Option 1: Research Paper.
You choose a question about global politics and seek to answer it. For instance, you might want to answer the following question: “Why did the United States choose to invade Iraq?”
A research paper, then, is focused on explanation.

Option 2: Policy Paper.
You choose a question about the appropriate foreign policy for a country. For instance, you might want to answer the following question: “Should the United States cease all military involvement in Iraq?”
A policy paper, then, is focused on prescription.

Prospectus Due February 17th, email to the Professor
Length: 1 page
Points: Worth 5 of the 35 points.

Guidelines:
In your prospectus, you must do the following things:
1. State the main research or policy question you plan to answer.
2. Briefly explain why it is important.
3. Briefly summarize possible alternative answers to the question.
4. List at least 4 sources that you plan to use from outside of class.

Rough Draft Due November 20th – bring 2 printed copies to class
Points: Worth 5 of the 35 points.

General Paper Guidelines
The paper should address a question about global politics.

In writing the paper, you must do the following things:
- Clearly articulate a central question.
- Clearly articulate your answer to the question. These are argumentative papers.
- Explain the significance of the question.
- Support your answer.
- Evaluate alternative answers.
- Use at least 4 outside sources: 1 book, 1 academic article, 1 news article, 1 primary source (see note on sources below)
- Use at least 2 sources from class readings.
- Use concepts from the course. For example:
- balance of power
- security dilemma
- norms
- compliance
- vulnerability interdependence

- Reference Section (Does not count as part of your page count.)
- Page numbers
- Title
- Use headers

Sources:
Your outside references can come from the following:

1. Books
2. Academic Journals (articles from political science or public policy journals are likely to be most relevant)
3. Newspapers (it is suggested that you stick to major national papers such as the New York Times, Washington Post, and Wall Street Journal)
4. Magazines (again, use major magazines, such as Newsweek or The Economist)
5. Primary sources: Government documents, for instance.

DO NOT use these sources:
1. Wikipedia
2. Web content which is not from one of the suggested published sources listed above

If you have a question about a source, just ask!

How to cite your sources:
You must use in-text parenthetical citations according to the author-date system described by the Chicago Manual of Style. Directions on citations can be found here: http://library.williams.edu/citing/styles/chicago2.php

Paper Structure

This is a social science paper. One very rough outline of how you might structure a paper is as follows:

I. Introduction: briefly state your research/policy question and answer
II. Describe the significance of your topic; provide any necessary background
III. Support your answer
IV. Consider the strengths and weaknesses of at least one alternative answer.
V. Conclude. Summarize all your arguments and tell us why this is significant.

But remember, this isn’t the only way to do things. Ask for help if you need it!
