Overview
This is an upper-division course on Japanese Politics. You do not have to know anything about Japan, and some background in political science would be helpful but is not necessary. The course is designed to give you a general understanding about the main features of contemporary Japanese politics and a more specialized understanding of a topic of your choice.

While the focus of this course is Japan, an important theme will be international comparison. We will be investigating the dynamics of Japan’s political institutions, but we will be doing so with an eye toward broader comparisons with other advanced industrialized countries. Therefore, we will be asking questions like: “How is Japan different from other industrialized countries? “How is Japan similar?” “Is Japan becoming more or less like other countries?”

Another theme that will be emphasized is change over time. This course is centered on four areas of policymaking: industrial, finance, social, and foreign policy. In each case we will be examining the ways that political, economic, and social actors interact to construct policy. In each issue area we will be discussing how the policymaking process and the policy itself has changed over time. So, we will also be asking questions like: “How has Japan’s foreign policy changed over time?” “What is the importance of international forces on Japanese policy?” “What domestic actors drive policy change?”

Japanese politics is usually viewed as being largely elite-driven. Indeed Japanese elites, like elite actors everywhere, have considerable influence on policy construction and implementation. However, rather than taking the usual approach to Japanese politics, which focuses on the “big three” power brokers—the national bureaucracy, the Liberal Democratic Party (LDP), and big business—this course will take a more bottom-up look at Japanese politics. After a few weeks of background on the important institutional structures of the political system, we will examine three different policy areas—social policy, environment, and foreign policy—with a special emphasis on how citizens are engaged in each issue area. Because there has been a dramatic transformation in Japan’s civil society in the last decade since the enactment of the 1998 Law to Promote Specified Nonprofit Activities (NPO Law), much of the focus of the course will be very contemporary, with an eye to how things have changed over time as well as how they vary across issue areas.

Objectives
There are five primary learning goals for this class:

- Understand the how government and politics works in Japan
- Develop a comparative perspective when analyzing politics around the world
- Expand independent research skills
- Improve oral presentation skills
- Improve academic writing skills
Expectations
This is an upper-division seminar, so I expect a high level of student involvement in the course. The course will involve in-class discussions of the reading, a take home midterm, and an independent research paper with an oral presentation about that research. I expect each student to come to class prepared and to participate actively while in seminar.

Grading
There are three types of assignments in this course on which your grade will be based: Quizzes, a take-home midterm exam, and a final research paper and presentation. This is a writing intensive course, and we will be focusing on writing throughout the course and will put considerable emphasis on improving writing skills.

Participation:
Students are expected to come prepared to class each session. This means having read and thought about the reading material. The success of this course depends in large part on student willingness to engage in the material and push our conversations up to a higher level. As part of the participation grade, students will also be required to contribute to a group presentation about “Japan in the news” one time during the semester.

Quizzes:
An unspecified number of in-class quizzes will be given. The purpose of these quizzes is to make sure that you keep up with the reading and to help prepare you for the larger take-home assignments. I will drop the lowest quiz (this means that you can miss one quiz without penalty). No make-up quizzes will be given.

Midterm Exam:
The midterm exam will cover the broad conceptual material in the first half of the course. It will be a take home exam. Grades will be reduced by 1/3 (e.g. from A- to B+) for every 24hrs or part thereof that the exam is late.

Research Paper
You will complete an independent research paper on the topic of your choice related to Japanese politics. The paper must be 18-20 pages long and use at least ten different academic sources (books, journal articles, primary sources; other sources such as newspaper articles, magazine articles, blogs, etc. can be used but don’t count toward the ten). About a month before the paper is due you will hand in a thesis statement, outline, and a preliminary bibliography. Throughout the semester you will be meeting in “research groups” and participate online in themed wikis with peers conducting research on similar topics in order to discuss your progress, share resources, and circulate drafts. In the final week you will present your research to your peers in an academic conference format of themed panels. You will also conduct peer reviews of rough drafts of the paper before handing it in at the beginning of exam week.

I am not tolerant of cheating or plagiarism. See the Student Handbook’s section on the Honor System for an explanation of student responsibilities, the process involved in prosecuting an Honor System violation, and an essay on plagiarism. http://www.wesleyan.edu/studenthandbook/3_honorsystem.ctt. I take the Honor System very seriously and will take any violations to the Honor Board. I will give you all the tools you need to do well on all of your assignments throughout the semester, so there should be no need for unacceptable assistance. If you have questions about the appropriate way to use or cite a source, please do not hesitate to ask me before you hand in your paper.

Breakdown of grade:
The breakdown of the course grade is as follows:

- Participation
  - In class discussion 10%
  - Quizzes 10%
- Take-home Midterm 35%
- Final Project
  - Oral Presentation 5%
  - Paper 40%

Grade Complaints:
Grade complaints will not be entertained until 24 hours after the exam/assignment is returned to you or more than two weeks after the exam/assignment has been returned. If you have a question concerning the grade you have received:

1) Wait 24 hours.
2) Write out an explanation of your question, including the reasons why you think your grade should be changed.
3) Submit your written complaint/question to me, and make an appointment to meet either during my office hours or at some other time.

A Final Note
I hope that you will look to me as a resource. I highly encourage you to take advantage of my office hours to stop by and talk about issues raised in the course, or other questions you have. I am very open to feedback about the course, and would appreciate you sharing any thoughts you might have for improvement earlier rather than later in the semester. I am very excited about this course on Japanese politics, and I hope that we can all have an interesting and productive semester!

I reserve the right to change this syllabus without notice.
